Happy Thought

Just think of it-September's near us! The summer days, that badly queer us, will soon be past andgone; we'll look outdoors some luscious morning and see a film of frost adorning the orchard and the lawn. September's coming, bless her gizzard, and later on come snow and blizzard, down from the arctic pole; and you and I, O gentle neighbor, will have to buckle down and labor to raise the price of coal. Let winter come, with roar and rumble! It seems to me I'll never grumble again at wintry blast; it seems to me I'll hail with gladness Old Boreas, whose maudlin madness has bored me in the past. The cold will be a welcome comer, for I have had my fill of summer, and dust and heat and flies, of torrid nights and scorching breezes, and prickly heat and punk diseases, and ants and brazen skies. September's coming, gentle reader, the heat, that long has been a leader, will sad and baking mortals cheer up. and fill the air with chortles, and smile and dance and sing. WALT MASON.
